EXHIBITION

OF THE WORKS OF

WASHINGTON ALLSTON.

This is the fourth in the series of exhibitions of the works of deceased American Artists.

A large number of William M. Hunt's paintings were shown in 1879, of Gilbert Stuart's in 1880, and in the same year drawings, paintings, and works of sculpture, by D. William Rimmer.

The administration of the Museum proposes to follow with collections of pictures by Copley, Trumbull, etc.

WASHINGTON ALLSTON.

THE Museum of Fine Arts feels it its duty to open its doors with a wide hospitality. It does not desire to be a mere reservoir, a stagnant receptacle of the good works of artists, either living or dead. While it boasts treasures of its own, it loves to see a current from outside freshening its appreciated masterpieces.

It has paid the honor that was due to our great portrait painter, Gilbert Stuart. It has brought within reach of general appreciation the extraordinary advance that is being made in the fascinating art of etching. And it would be indeed a pity if the works of Allston were overlooked.

Very lately his sketches and many drawings and unfinished pictures have fallen to the Museum, and this circumstance makes the exhibition which is now open appropriate and natural.

Some forty years ago an exhibition of many pictures of Allston was opened in Harding's Gallery in School Street. It was enjoyed exceedingly, but there has been no important public show of his pictures since then. No better time than the present could be found to contrast the old imaginative style, then aimed at by the highest minds, with the extraordinary ability, skill, and realism of the modern generation of painters.

Apparently there are more clever painters now in the world than there were ever before. Better prices are paid, and there is an art movement throughout Christendom which the future will mark as a great awakening of æsthetic and decorative influences. Everything which earth and sea can offer, everything which the farthest land can show of costume, is painted, and well done. Facts are in the ascendant, Science presides over them, and poor Imagination somewhat droops its wings.

But our London minister, Mr. James Russell Lowell, has just told the world that science will not stop good literature, that the poet and the prose writer shall yet be heard.

Mr. Allston belonged to another time and a different way of thinking from this. He almost closed the period when the great influences of Italy were felt. It was the Church that fostered Art in that lovely land, and the painter was not asked to render with photographic accuracy the belongings of the house or the fields; but religion, fed by emotion, demanded imagination's aid to influence the souls of men. At the head of these servants of hers rises the divine, masculine soul of Michael Angelo, and at his side sits, with almost feminine sweetness and grace, the angelic spirit of Raphael. Allston's soul was nourished from these springs. They had the grand style, and that he believed in and loved. Nature had given him a poetic enthusiasm for high and holy things, and we all felt in his presence that purity and fervor without which even imagination cannot soar.

As music is not sweet to him who hath it not in his soul, so to the prosaic herd is the appeal of imaginative painting vain. It is not what they see, but what they are made to feel, which should furnish the pleasure. Accustomed as we now are to the exact rendering of actualities, the old treatment has something remote, incomplete, and unsatisfactory; but if we do feel, do sympathize with Allston and the great ones of old, we receive a pleasure in quite another quarter of the mind, and a much higher one than the best realism can furnish.

In truth, imagination rules the world of art, and the lesser faculties are its instruments and tools. Therefore this exhibition of Allston's art is fit and timely to remind us of the supreme goddess, and through the law of reaction her recovery of a world which begins to miss her so much.

The high excellence of Allston was neither a trick of the mind nor of the hand. It came from a beautiful character, nourished by what this world affords of best. Wherever he went, the best people loved and honored him. Not only did he share in the aerial flights of Coleridge, but the prosiest minds, if sensitive to good, approached him with reverence. His purity was so hostile to grossness that he even complained of beauty if it were too sensuous. He was so mirthful that his first successes were genre pictures of comedy, and he led the way which Leslie and Newton so brilliantly followed. But he loved the sublime and the mysterious; he instinctively believed in ghosts, and felt at home where other artists would not, in painting Saul and the terrible Witch of Endor. If his execution were incomplete, if with all his accurate drawing he fell behind the greatest, still we gratefully remember that he led us out through his heavenly fancy into those celestial spaces where details are lost in the infinite azure, and wings carry the spirit where feet could never climb.

South Carolina, at the time Allston was born, in the year 1779, on the 5th of November, was an aristocracy, which, if it had only contributed the exquisite manners, the beautiful self-respect of Allston to the world, would not have existed in vain. Refinement, in its highest sense, flowed from within outward, and enabled him to fill what Lowell calls, in speaking of him, the "arduous office of gentleman." A certain delicacy of constitution, shared in by his future brother-in-law, brought him at the age of seven to Newport. The gracious climate, friendly to tender spirits, did something to sweeten the old theology when Channing breathed its air. We must believe in its balm when we know it fed the pencils of Stuart and Malbone, and the youthful soul as well of our great painter.

We do not hear much, later at Cambridge, of fame from scholastic toil, but there are souvenirs still treasured of the art which claimed him undisputed by the professions.

His college course accomplished, his face turned towards Europe with an instinct as strong as the sunflower to the sun. He sailed in May, 1801, in his twenty-third year, to England; lingered there securing friends, trying his hand at a few pictures which were exhibited at the Royal Academy, and then fled southward, putting away in his memory that souvenir of Alpine glories shown in the great landscape, "Diana and her Nymphs," till he reached Italy.

At Venice he saturated himself with the sunshine of Titian, and so thoroughly that at Rome, for years afterwards, he was remembered as the "American Titian." Mr. Lowell's poetic, exquisite picture, "Amy Robsart," owes its existence, as Allston told me, to his remembrance of a fair Lombard head, framed in tawny gold, of the color that Titian loved to paint. Soon he found himself in Rome; there he studied four years, — four years that he never forgot to the end of his life. The magic of Rome is too potent for weak brains, — their individuality is lost in the sea of beauty round them; but while it is fatal to mediocrity, it is a stimulus to genius.

It were vain to ask of a sensitive nature that it should contemplate this spoil of the centuries without feeling the influence of these masterpieces. To this influence Allston was docile as a child. He may be called a true child of Italy, happy to tread where the illustrious had preceded, dreaming their dreams and rapt in their visionary light.

At the end of his four-years' residence in Rome, he returned to England, where he found for long a happy home, and recognition by the best. The complete whole, the unity between the pictures of Allston and his engaging presence and lovely manners, indeed his angelic personality, made him felt everywhere. His works and himself mutually interpreted each other. He was a Bohemian, but one who had wandered from some celestial country. He would talk and tell stories by the hour, smoke endlessly, even keeping by him the little ends of cigars, which were dear to him as reminding him of Italy, where the smallest bit was treasured.

While admitted as a friend and equal into the society of Coleridge, Wordsworth, Lamb, and Lawrence, he was most fortunate in having, as friends and companions, two countrymen of his own age, of a genius, though not so lofty, yet as genuine as his own, — Leslie and Newton. While under the spell they wove, Washington Irving all but threw down his pen to complete a quartet of painters, of a harmony the rarest.

Then came the war of 1812. It could not sunder the ties which bound Allston to his English friends. He told me that as news of naval victory after victory came flying across the seas, he from delicacy abstained from visiting an English friend, he thought possibly irritated by our successes. But he got a note saying, "I know why you stay away; but come, and receive my congratulations. I had not thought it, but you are a chip of the old block after all."

One can easily understand the pull that war had upon Allston. He seemed to hear a voice saying, "What! live on complacently with our enemy, when such a nation as ours calls you!" He filially obeyed, and thereby artistically made the great mistake of his life. He could have helped England by staying, and himself as well. But we were not ready for him yet; and so he lived his life out, buried in Cambridgeport, and the glorious visions which had upheld him, ever growing thinner and thinner. His pictures, while they had the spirituality, at last got the thinness and immateriality of the ghosts he believed in. His mind held with a certain clutch, when he left England, the vision of the feast of Belshazzar; but in America it seemed to become an unreality at once, and the dream which at first smiled and beckoned, brooded nightmare-like at last upon his spirit.

It is not with impunity that the strongest artist can breathe an air alien to art, or keep the heart fresh while isolated from all sympathy with its work. America indeed loved and honored him; the prices he asked were gladly given; friendly hands were stretched out from every side: but what was lacking was that vivifying air in which alone the fibres of being take hold upon life, — that familiar sunshine without which the will droops discouraged.

Mrs. Jamieson found our painter, so lonely in his life, so noble in his works, as she thought in a desert, with a boundless surprise. She thought it a miracle that he should be here at all, and keep his high place. But she did not know how impossible was that life, sustained chiefly from sources in the far past and by an encouragement that was now silent.

When the end came, it was not uncheered by a poetry suited to the dead we mourned; and amid reverential tears, and fitful lustre of torches borne by the youth of the University, Allston was carried to the grave and beyond to that immortal company of poets and painters who, we love to think, welcomed him as a brother.

T. G. APPLETON.

WASHINGTON ALLSTON.

201. Belshazzar's Feast (in the Hall).

"It is known that Mr. Allston began the picture in London before his return to his native country, and had very nearly finished it here fifteen or twenty years ago. Being obliged to quit the room in which he worked upon it, and unable immediately to find another large enough for the purpose, the picture was rolled up and laid aside. Various circumstances prevented his resuming the work until within a few years before his death. At one period it was considered by himself as requiring not many weeks' labor to complete it. In that state it was seen by some friends, to whom it appeared a finished picture. For some reason, however, the artist thought that the effect of the composition would be improved by a change in the perspective, and, in connection with this, an enlargement of the figures in the foreground. With this view, the king, the queen, and the soothsayers were to be repainted. He undertook the labor, and the entire figure of the king, except the left foot, and the heads of the soothsayers, were erased. What progress he had made in restoring these will be readily seen, as the picture is in every respect as he left it; except that the original figure of the king, now pumiced down so as to leave little more than the first color, was found covered with a uniform coat of dead color, which completely obliterated even the outline, and of the new figure he had repainted, but not finished, only the right hand."

"Upon the head of the soothsayer, who faces the spectator, are the last touches ever made by the pencil of the artist, and but a few hours before his death." — 1845.

GILBERT STUART: b. Rhode Island, 1755; d. Boston, 1828.

Educated at the University of Glasgow. Pupil of Benj. West in London. After having practised with great success as a portrait painter in London, he returned to America in 1792, and settled for a time in Philadelphia. Among the sitters of Stuart in Europe were three kings, Louis XVI., George III., and George IV., the last painted while he was Prince of Wales. In America he painted six Presidents. In 1807 he settled in Boston, where he afterwards died.

Numbers 300 to 308 are by Stuart.

300. — Washington. "The Athenæum Head."

Painted from life in 1796. Bought after Stuart's death, of his widow, and presented to the Boston Athenæum.

"A letter of Stuart's which appeared in the New York Evening Post, in 1863, attested by three gentlemen of Boston, with one from Washington, making the appointment for a sitting, proves the error long current in regard both to the dates and the number of this artist's original portraits of Washington. He there distinctly states that he never executed but three from life, the first of which was so unsatisfactory that he destroyed it; the second was the picture for Lord Lansdowne; and the third, the one now belonging to the Boston Athenæum. The finishing touches were put to the one in September, 1795; to the other, at Philadelphia, in the spring of 1796. This last, it appears by a letter of Mr. Custis, which we have examined, was undertaken against the desire of Washington, and at the earnest solicitation of his wife, who wished a portrait from life of her illustrious husband, to be placed among the other family pictures at Mt. Vernon. For this express purpose, and to gratify her, the artist commenced the work, and Washington agreed to sit once more. It was left intentionally unfinished."

The second is now in London.

301. — Martha Washington.

JOHN NEAGLE: b. 1799; d. 1865.

A portrait painter comparatively self-taught. Began the practice of the higher branches of his profession in 1818 in Philadelphia, settling in Lexington, Ky., and finally in New Orleans. He was a son-in-law of the artist Sully, from whom, in early life, he received much encouragement and help.

309. Portrait of Gilbert Stuart. Athenæum.

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY: b. Boston, Mass., 1737; d. 1815.

Historical and portrait painter, of English and Irish extraction. He left Boston for Italy in 1774, having already attained eminence as a portrait painter. In 1775 he established himself in London, where he became a member of the Royal Academy in 1779. At this time he executed his masterpieces, "The Death of Lord Chatham" and "The Death of Major Peirson," both now in the National Gallery of London.

Studied under Prof. Morse and at the National Academy. Worked in New York and Boston, and afterwards was for many years the leading American portrait painter in Rome. Now resides in New York.

315. Portrait of John Quincy Adams. From Faneuil Hall.

JOHN TRUMBULL: b. Connecticut, 1756; d. New York, 1843.

A son of the first governor of Connecticut, after the separation from Great Britain. He served for quite a period in the army of the Revolution. In 1780 he went abroad and studied for some time with Benj. West. In 1786 he produced his first considerable work, "The Death of General Warren." In 1794 he went to England as secretary to Minister Jay, and remained there ten years, and again lived there from 1808 to 1816, till his final return to the United States. He then painted the four large pictures in the Capitol at Washington. He was the first president of the American Academy of Fine Arts, founded in 1816. Resided in New Haven from 1837 to 1841.

321. Portrait of Rev. Wm. Ellery Channing.

Mrs. Eustis.

ALBERT CUYP: b. at Dort, 1605; date of death unknown, but still living in 1683.

Though known chiefly as a landscape painter, he executed also some good portraits. The management of light was his great power, and he has been called the "Dutch Claude." Among the best of cattle painters.

322. Cuyp's Daughter.

Sumner bequest.

SIR PETER LELY: b. in Westphalia, 1618; settled in England, 1641; d. 1680.

An imitator of Van Dyck. "The Beauties of the Court of Charles II.," at Hampton Court Palace, are among the best preserved of his works.

323. Portrait of a Man in Armor. William W. Greenough.

324. Portrait of Sir Charles Hobby. Athenæum.

SIR THOMAS LAWRENCE: b. 1769; R. A., 1794; P. R. A. 1820; d. 1830.

From the time of his election as a member of the Academy, to his death, his career as a portrait painter was unrivalled; he contributed from 1787 to 1830, inclusive, three hundred and eleven pictures to the exhibitions. The portraits of the Emperor Francis, of Pius VII., and of Cardinal Gonsalvi, in the Waterloo Gallery at Windsor, are among the masterpieces of the art of portraiture.

325. Portrait of Benj. West. Bequest of S. H. Perkins.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS: b. England, 1723; d. 1792.

In 1768 he was unanimously elected president of the then newly established Royal Academy of Arts, in London, and was knighted by George III. on the occasion. He exhibited altogether two hundred and forty-five works at the Royal Academy.

326. The Banished Lord. Bequest of S. H. Perkins.

327. Portrait of Miss Louisa Pyne.

HANS HOLBEIN: b. Augsburg, 1498 ; d. in London, 1554.

German school. A protégé at Basle of the printer Auerbach, whose editions he enriched with remarkable compositions, and of Erasmus, of whom he made an excellent portrait, he quickly acquired a great reputation. On his going to England, Erasmus intrusted him with his portrait for Sir Thomas More, his friend, and added a hearty letter of recommendation. He arrived in England in 1525. The High Chancellor received him with distinction, lodged him in his palace, occupied him for three years, and presented him to the king, Henry VIII., who appointed him the royal painter, and covered him with honors. He died at London, 1554, of the plague.

332. A Donor and his two patron saints, St. Peter with the keys, Paul with a sword. German school of the first half of the sixteenth century. Attributed to Hans Holbein the younger.

This picture was bought at Leipsic, where it had been in the possession of one family for a couple of centuries, by a young American, who took it to Berlin and submitted it to the judgment of an expert, by whom it was pronounced to be an original by Holbein.

So many false attributions of pictures to famous painters have, however, been made, even by the best connoisseurs, that it is well to avoid positiveness in such matters. The picture is certainly a most excellent representative of the school of Holbein, if it be not by the master himself. Every part, even to the most minute accessories, is highly finished; the shadows are transparent; the robe of St. Peter and the missal rich in color; the subdued arabesques in the background charming in taste; and lastly, the hands, like those painted by Holbein, are so literally rendered that their truth to life can only be appreciated by looking at them with a magnifying-glass.

Between the head of the donor and the heads of the saints, there is a strange disproportion in respect to size, which, more than anything else in this picture, would inspire doubt as to its having been painted by the great artist of Augsburg and Basle. The heads of the saints are not unworthy of him; that of St. Paul is intellectual and refined, and that of St. Peter, though of a somewhat common type, is full of sentiment.

FRA BARTOLOMEO (Baccio della Porta): b. near Florence, 1469; d. there, 1517.

He began his artistic career in the school of Cosimo Rosselli; studied the antiquities of the Medicis Gardens, and especially the works of Leonardo da Vinci; an ardent follower of Savonarola, in whose convent of San Marco he was besieged, together with its inmates, in 1498. In consequence of a vow to espouse religion, should he escape the danger he was then in, he became a Dominican friar in 1500, at the age of thirty-one. He then abandoned painting for a number of years, but afterwards resumed it, and perfected himself by studies, in Rome and Florence, of the great masters of the time.

339. The Broken Pitcher. C. W. Galloupe.

GUERCINO: b. at Cento, near Bologna, 1592; d. Bologna, 1666.

He was self-taught, and after studying some time at Bologna and Venice, he went to Rome, where he became an imitator of the style of Caravaggio. His masterpiece is the great picture of the Burial of Saint Petronilla, in the Capitol, Rome.

340. Sta. Barbara. Francis Brooks.

JEAN BAPTISTE GREUZE: b. at Tournus, 1725; d. 1805.

A portrait and genre painter. His favorite subjects were illustrations of the affections or domestic duties, their observance and violation. He is unique in the French school.

DAVID TENIERS (the younger): b. at Antwerp, 1610; d. Brussels, 1694.

A pupil of his father, and afterwards of Adrien Brauer and of Rubens. Became principal painter to the Archduke Leopold, governor of the Netherlands; and was also largely employed by the king of Spain. His works are exceedingly numerous, but are nevertheless held in the highest estimation, and command very large prices.

343. The Alchemist. Francis Brooks

P. P. RUBENS: b. Westphalia, 1577.

Studied in Antwerp; resided in Italy and Spain, 1600-1608; afterwards settled in Antwerp, and died there, 1640. In 1625 he completed the celebrated series of pictures for the palace of the Luxembourg, now in the Louvre, commemorating the marriage of Marie de Medicis and Henry IV. of France. In 1628 he was sent on a diplomatic mission to Philip IV. of Spain by the Infanta Isabella, and in the following year he was sent on a similar mission to Charles I. of England, by whom he was knighted in 1630. He died possessed of immense wealth, and was buried with extraordinary pomp in the church of St. Jacques, in Antwerp. His pictures are exceedingly numerous, amounting to several thousands, but many of them were painted from his sketches by his scholars.

"Rubens," says Sir Joshua Reynolds, "was perhaps the greatest master in the mechanical part of the art, the best workman with his tools, that ever exercised a pencil. . . . His animals, particularly his lions and horses, are so admirable that it may be said they were never properly represented but by him. His portraits rank with the best works of the painters who have made that branch of the art the sole business of their lives. The same may be said of his landscapes. Rubens' masterpiece is generally considered 'The Descent from the Cross,' at Antwerp. He is still seen to great advantage at Antwerp; but probably the best idea of his great and versatile powers is conveyed by the collection at Munich, in which are ninety-five of his works, several of them masterpieces."

PAUL DELAROCHE. Christ the Hope and Support of the Afflicted. A Cartoon. See Isaiah, ch. 41, v. 13. "For I, the Lord thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee."

The first drawing of this composition was made at Eisenach, in 1847, and given by the artist to the Duchess of Orleans. In 1851 Delaroche painted a sketch from a tracing of the original drawing (6 x 8 inches), which was purchased at the sale of his works at Paris in 1857 for $1,550, and is now in the Belmont Gallery at New York. At the time of his death, Delaroche had begun to put the composition upon canvas, figures life-size. Property of the Athenæum.

"The moment represented is the conclusion of the three hours' agony, when the darkness which has over-spread the land is dispelled by the light which suddenly streams down upon the cross. There is an effect of something startling and unexpected about the whole of this superb composition; the figure on the cross is not of one dying, but of one just dead; the hardly closed eyes and fallen jaw, displaying the teeth, testify that the end has come. Upon the instantaneous return of the light the centurion falls upon his knee, the Virgin sinks backwards in a swoon; one near her is startled by her cry, another raises her hand to shade her eyes from the sudden gleam; one spectator covers his face with his hands, others look back with a movement of affright; two of the Jews who had derided the sufferer turn away to escape; even a dog, seen at the left, turns its head in terror as it hastens to follow. It is indeed a wonderful picture, and one which exhibits in the highest degree the genius of the master."

With additional work by Rembrandt before the re-touch of Capt. Baillie. The additional shading of the background covers the design of the arch. Brilliant impression; full of burr.

According to Bartsch, the title of "Hundred-Guilder Piece" came in this way: "A dealer in Italian prints offered some engravings by Marcantonio to Rembrandt, fixing the price of the whole at one hundred florins, but Rembrandt, instead of purchasing them, proposed an exchange of this print, which was accepted, and the dealer departed, contented with his bargain." This version is, however, not fully proven.

"The plate of this beautiful portrait is still in existence, owned by Mr. J. P. Six, of Amsterdam. As an example of etching, this print will repay long and careful study. The accuracy of eye and hand requisite to work up the shadows was something marvellous. The lines cross and recross in every imaginable direction, but are never confused. The shadows, even in their very deepest, are transparent, and the amount of work in the whole print astonishing."

429. The Ferry.

Presented by the heirs of the late J. A. Blanchard.

CHARLES LE BRUN: b. Paris, 1619; d. 1690.

A protégé of Chancellor Seguier, who assisted in his education and sent him to Rome with Poussin in 1642, where he remained four years, and then returning to Paris he painted a very large number of works. He took an active part in the formation of the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture in 1648, and occupied all the posts of honor in this celebrated institution. In 1660 he was appointed by Colbert to be director of the Gobelin Tapestry Works, and furnished the designs which were there executed. He was made court painter to Louis XIV. in 1662, in consequence of his success in painting subjects drawn from the life of Alexander, which were executed in tapestry. In 1666 he profited by his great favor with Louis XIV. to obtain the establishment of a French school at Rome. He executed an enormous number of decorative paintings, many of them on the largest scale.

430. Alexander and Thalestris. J. G. Farwell.
For sale.

CARLO MARATTI: b. at Camurano, Italy, 1625; d. Rome, 1713.

After the death of Cortina and Sacchi, he was for half a century the most distinguished painter in Rome. In 1702 and 1703 he restored, with the sanction of Pope Clement XI., the frescos of Raphael in the Vatican, which had been suffered to fall into a state of decay and imminent ruin.

GALLERY OF TEXTILES.

TAPESTRIES.

THE three magnificent specimens of tapestry lent to the Museum by Mr. George O. Hovey, and once the property of King Louis Philippe, were saved from the fire which destroyed the château at Neuilly in 1848. They were purchased in Paris by Mr. Hovey, who brought them to Boston, where they were again saved from the flames in November, 1872. The dimensions of the two largest are 20 x 12, the third is 15 x 12. They represent Summer, Autumn, and Winter. They are supposed to be at least two hundred years old, though it is difficult to be precise about the date of arras hangings. They are what are technically called tapestries de haute lisse, i. e., wrought on the upright or vertical frame which was substituted for the Saracenic low or horizontal frame (called basse lisse) by the Flemish and French artisans in the fourteenth century.

The question is often asked as to how far such textile fabrics are the work of the hand. We quote from Dr. Rock's descriptive catalogue: "Tapestry is neither real weaving nor true embroidery, but unites in its working these two principles into one. It is not embroidery, though so very like it, for tapestry is not worked upon what is really a web, having both warp and woof, but upon a series of closely set, fine strings. Though wrought in a loom and upon a warp stretched along a frame, it has no woof thrown across those threads with a shuttle or any like appliance, but its web is done with many short threads, all variously colored, and put in by a kind of needle. With the upright as with the flat frame, the workman went the same road to his labors; but in either of these ways he had to grope in the dark a great deal on his path. In both he was obliged to put in the threads on the back or wrong side of the piece, following the sketch as best he could behind the strings or warp. As the face was downward in the flat frame he had no means of looking at it to correct a fault. In the upright frame he might go in front, and with his own doings in open view on the one hand and the original design full before him on the other, he could mend as he went on, step by step, the smallest mistake, were it but a single thread."

THREE SPECIMENS OF FLEMISH TAPESTRY, formerly in the château at Neuilly, representing Summer, Autumn, and Winter. Lent by the late Geo. O. Hovey.

GOBELIN TAPESTRY of the 15th century, representing France crowned by Victory and attended by Minerva. The female figure to the left represents a conquered kingdom. The two to the right are prisoners. Signed I. Van Schorrel. Presented by Miss Deacon.

The famous manufactory of the Gobelin was founded at Paris towards the end of the 15th century by Jean Gobelin, a native of Rheims. In 1662 Louis XIV. and his minister, Colbert, united in this establishment all the trades which were under the royal protection, such as potters, weavers, etc. Charles le Brun, the painter (born 1619, died 1690), was appointed its director in 1663. He furnished designs for many fine pieces of tapestry, which were surrounded by rich framework of fruits and flowers designed by Baptiste Monnoyer.

AN ARRAZZETTO of the 16th century. Subject, the Assumption of the Virgin Mary. Design of the Raphael-esque school. From the Annunziata Convent, Naples, to which it was given by Cardinal Caraffa, whose arms it bears. Purchased from Sig. Alessandro Castellani.

Athenæum.

TAPESTRY. Designed by Le Brun. Lent by John H. Sturgis. Over the entrance, large BRUSSELS TAPESTRY. Sacrifice in the Temple. Signed F. v. H. (Van der Hecke?)

Ralph B. King, N. Y.

On the walls are hung several fine specimens of PERSIAN FABRICS, Wall Hangings, Prayer Rugs, etc., of the 16th and 17th centuries. These were exhibited by Sig. Castellani at Philadelphia; and were purchased and presented to the Museum by Martin Brimmer, Esq.

PERSIAN RUG. Presented to a French minister at the court of the Shah, and purchased at sale of his effects. Fine Cashmere wool; design very rich and beautiful. Presented by George B. Dorr.

WEST ROOM.

POTTERY AND PORCELAIN.

THE interest in fictile wares has always existed, and it always must exist. From time to time it reaches a sort of high tide when all the world consents to look and to know something about it. Within the last ten years this interest has been great, and it is likely to continue.

The fact that pottery and porcelain belong to the daily business of life, and that they are indispensable to the great event of that life,—a man's dinner,—make them indeed objects in which all may take a living interest.

Among the very first works which the hand of man has formed are pots and dishes; and one of the first machines was the potter's wheel, which is in use to-day as it was in the days of the pyramid builders. One other reason why pottery is among the most interesting of the works of man is, that it most easily receives the impression which the taste, the skill, the art of the workman can give it.

We thus get in the pot not only the useful thing, but whatever of form, of decoration, of beauty, of art, the soul of the workman may strive to express. The study of pottery, therefore, is, in some degree, the study of a part of man's soul. From the very outset, even as far back as the "Stone age," there were attempts at beauty of form and fitness of decoration. We find this expression of the artistic feeling in its pottery among all nations, from the Egyptians, through the Assyrians, the Greeks, the Moors, the Italians, the Germans; everywhere, and in all nations.

The Incas of Peru and the Toltecs of Mexico had their peculiarities of form and of decoration, though it must be observed that these earliest forms have a close likeness to the earliest attempts of all other peoples.

But when we get to a higher style of expression, we find the peculiarities most marked; and in such nations as the Chinese and the Japanese they reach art of the highest quality, and most especially in COLOR and decoration. There seems to have been, and to be, in the Asiatic races, this genius for color quite marvellous and quite superior to anything the white races have done. This is seen not only in its porcelains, but as well in its carpets, its shawls, its stuffs.

The loan collections in the Museum show excellent and varied examples of this.

It may be observed that the Chinese and Japanese artists did not sit down to copy a flower, or a tree, or person. There is a certain something which we choose to call the ideal which they caught. May it not be called the soul of the object rather than its body? And yet their work is not slovenly and careless, but is marked above all others by thoroughness and care.

The Greek artist appears again to have found his highest expression in FORM; so that in the Greek vase we look for and find what we feel to be grace, beauty, and use in perfect combination. The collection in the Museum presents good illustrations of this; while the paintings upon them do not always reach a high standard of art. Nor must we claim that every Greek amphora or kylix is perfection even in form. It is not so. Nor is every picture of Raphael perfect; nor every play of Shakespeare divine. Only, among the multitude of Greek vases, etc., which the tombs have preserved for us, are to be found examples of form which have not been and cannot be surpassed.

The visitor should notice the collection of Etruscan vases in the Museum; and should observe that they are quite different from the Greek, which for so long a time have been miscalled Etruscan. This collection of Etruscan fictile work is most rare and valuable, as illustrating the art of pottery.

We find, again, among the Arabs and Moors, and especially those of Spain, another expression of art in pottery, which is beautiful and peculiar to them. Their decorations did not include the human figure, but were geometrical and whimsical, sometimes including plant forms and animals in great variety, — what have come to be termed Arabesques. Some excellent examples are in the collection. But the coloring of those made in Spain bore a shimmer, called a lustre, which is peculiar, and seems to have been original. It was produced by the use of mineral salts or oxides.

This Moorish ware was the parent of the Italian Maiolica, of which some good and very valuable examples have been presented to the Museum. When these Maiolica wares were first made in Italy (about A. D. 1500), they all had this lustre, and it was greatly enhanced in beauty above the work of the Moors by Mastro Giorgio at Gubbio, fine examples of whose work sell for enormous prices; but most of what is now called Maiolica does not bear the lustre, as the examples in the Museum make apparent. Both the Moorish and the Maiolica wares will repay attention, as they were the precursors of the porcelains and Faïences which afterward reached such great perfection in Europe.

Of European porcelains, the Dresden or Meissen and that of Sevres reached the greatest perfectness, and have commanded most attention and most money. Examples of these can be studied at the Museum. But following the discovery of the true Kaolinic or China clay in Europe, Böttcher, about 1710, succeeded in making true porcelain in Saxony. During that century, porcelain manufactories were started in nearly all the countries of Europe, in which porcelain of greater or less perfectness was made. The study and collection of these has now become important, enlisting much mind and much money. These collections are of great value, and it is not uncommon that as much as $10,000 is paid for a single vase or dish. Growing out of all this art and this interest comes the porcelain and pottery used in daily life. In these, within this half-century, have been great improvements, and to this every household bears its testimony. For thus helping to beautify and perfect our household life we may willingly thank the lovers and collectors of pottery and porcelain, and we may and do look to collections in Museums of Art, also, to help on the good work.

C. W. E.

The visitor will find antique Egyptian, Cyprian, Etruscan, Grecian, and Græco-Italian pottery on the first floor in the "Egyptian" and "Greek Vase" rooms. In the "West" room are, in Case A, specimens of Maiolica and Robbia ware; in Case B, Compartments 1 to 10, porcelains; Case C, modern porcelains; in Case D, specimens of Spanish, Moorish, Kabyle, and modern Egyptian work; in Case E, Persian and Rhodian ware and modern Bombay pottery; Case F, chiefly English pottery; Case G, American pottery; Case H, Peruvian and Mexican pottery; and in Case I, pottery of the American Mound Builders.

CASE A.

MAIOLICA AND ROBBIA WARE.

In what is called Hispano-Moorish ware, we find the original source of this beautiful art-manufacture. Moorish potters were established in the island of Majorca (in the Tuscan dialect Maiolica) at a very early period, and fabricated earthenware plates distinguished for the beauty of their metallic oxide glaze. They adorned them with Arabic patterns and fantastic animals. The oldest establishment of this sort of pottery was at Malaga, where it was introduced by the Arabs or the Moors, who perhaps derived the secret of making it from Persia. The Pisans, who conquered the Balearic Islands in the twelfth century, are said to have brought the manufacture of Maiolica to Italy from Majorca. In the fifteenth century it was chiefly made at Faenza, under the names of pietra or terra di Faenza, whence the French derived the name of "faïence," which they applied to it. Unlike porcelain, it is made of common clay, and being only vitrified upon the surface retains a certain degree of porosity. That which was covered with a plumbiferous glaze, silicate of lead, was called "Mezza Maiolica." Thanks to the patronage of the Dukes of Urbino, the Maiolica made at Urbino, Castel Durante, Pesaro, and Gubbio attained a high degree of perfection during the first half of the sixteenth century, after which it began to decline under the growing taste for porcelain. The names of such distinguished artists as Giorgio Andreoli of Pavia, sculptor and potter established at Gubbio in 1498, whose plates are distinguished for their beautiful, iridescent glaze; of Francesco Xanto da Rovigo, of whose artistic skill the plate No. 7 (signed and dated 1532) is an example ; and those of Guido and Orazio Fontana, who worked for Guidobaldo, Duke of Urbino (1540-1560), are connected with the great manufactories above mentioned. The largest platter, No. 6 (subject, the Triumph of Bacchus), and the two richly adorned and painted bottles (gourds), Nos. 8 and 9, are probably the work of Orazio Fontana.

The erroneous idea that Raphael made designs expressly for the Maiolica of Urbino and Castel Durante (whence the name Raphael ware, often given to it) may have arisen from the fact that some of the designs were taken from his works, or, as has been conjectured, from the substitution of his name for that of Raffaelino del Colle, a painter who worked for Guidobaldo I. della Rovere.

There is little doubt that the great reverence felt for the name of Raphael has contributed to the preservation of many of these fragile treasures, which were greatly valued by the principal families of Urbino and the Romagna.

The Duke Alfonso d'Este, who was himself an amateur potter, contributed not a little to the general use of Maiolica for domestic purposes by substituting it upon his own table for the plate which he was obliged to pawn to meet the expenses of the war which he and the Venetians waged with Pope Julius after the League of Cambray, in 1510. The Ferrarese factories were, for the most part, inactive from this time until 1522, when they again flourished, for we know that the celebrated painters, Giovanni and Battista Dossi, made designs for them in 1524. Duke Alfonso then wrote to Titian to procure for him a number of pieces of Maiolica from Murano. Among them were many Spezieria jars used to hold drugs. Of such jars we have specimens in Nos. 14 and 15, probably of Florentine manufacture.

No. 2 is an excellent example of the plates called "amatorii," or marriage plates. Upon these plates lovers caused the portraits of their betrothed to be painted, with such inscriptions as "Camilla bella," "Lucia diva," etc., etc., and sent them as presents, laden with fruits, sweetmeats, or confectionery.

We now come to the works of a celebrated artist who combined sculpture and painting with the Ceramic art, and originated a new and beautiful branch of decorative art. This was Lucca della Robbia, one of the most eminent of the many great Florentine artists of the fifteenth century. After long practising as a sculptor, he devoted himself to the discovery of a hard enamel which would give terra-cotta the durability of marble, and after repeated failures at length attained the desired result about the year 1443. With the true feeling of an artist, Lucca long used a pure white enamel upon the figures which he modelled, and preserved their sculptural feeling by keeping color in his backgrounds and accessories. Thinking, however, that his works might, if more highly colored, be used as substitutes for fresco painting, he afterwards added other hues than pure blue and green to his palette, and began to color the flesh parts and draperies of his figures. His nephew, Andrea, carried this still further, and under his hands and those of his four sons the distinctive character of pure Robbia ware was gradually lost, until it became an enamelled picture not much above the level of wax-work. The difference between the art in its purity and its decline may be judged of by the "Madonna and Child" attributed to Lucca, and the "Madonna adoring the Infant Jesus," by Andrea or one of his sons. The first is a pure and charming work, which, though by no means one of his best, will give the visitor some idea of the great talent of the artist and the plastic propriety of his work. The second will show him how, by overstepping the bounds which should separate painting from sculpture, a hybrid species of art was produced which had the merits of neither.

PORCELAIN.

Porcelain was made in Europe as early as the year 1581, under the patronage of Francis I., Duke of Tuscany. The manufactory had but a brief existence of about ten years. The next known attempt was made at St. Cloud, in the year 1695, by the Chicauneau family, where soft paste porcelain was made. In the year 1710 Bottcher had the honor to be the first to discover the art of making hard porcelain in Europe. Bottcher, born in Schleitz, in Prussia, received his education as an apothecary in Berlin, and in the year 1710, suspected of being an alchemist, fled to Saxony. Augustus II. hearing of him in Dresden, and supposing that he possessed the secret of making gold, took him under his patronage. It was while searching for the "philosopher's stone" that, in making a crucible in 1705, he discovered the nature of the clay to be Kaoline.* From that time he continued his experiments until hard porcelain was made.

The manufacture in Vienna was begun under one Stölzel, who fled from Meissen, in 1720. The Höchst pottery, in Mayence, began to make porcelain, under the direction of a

* KAOLINE, the Chinese name for porcelain earth, is composed of silica, alumina, and water (hydrous silicate of alumina). It is produced by the disintegration of the crystalline mineral, felspar, through the action of the atmosphere on granite and other rocks that contain it.

Felspar, the Petuntze of the Chinese, consists of silica, alumina, and potash or soda, or both, and in the disintegration referred to it loses all the potash and soda and part of the silica, leaving only the remaining silica and the whole of the alumina, with which a small amount of water becomes combined. The kaoline resulting has an average composition as follows:—

| | | | | | | | |
|---------|---|---|---|---|---|---|--------------|
| Silica | . | . | . | . | . | . | 47 per cent. |
| Alumina | . | . | . | . | . | . | 40 " |
| Water | . | . | . | . | . | . | 13 " |

workman from Vienna, named Ringler, in 1740. In Fürstenberg, the porcelain manufactory was established in 1750, by Bengraf, who came from Höchst. The establishment in Berlin was first attempted in 1751, but obtained little success until 1761, under Gottskowski.

The Frankenthal manufactory was established in 1755, by Paul Hannüß, who had been forced to leave Sèvres, and was assisted by Ringler, who, finding his secret had been stolen from him in Höchst, quitted that place and offered his services to Hannüß.

The Ludwigsburg factory was established in 1758, by Ringler, under the patronage of the Duke of Wurtemberg. In the same year the first manufactory in Thuringia was commenced.

In Russia, two manufactories were begun about the year 1756. In Holland, porcelain manufactories were established at Weesp, in 1764; at the Hague, in 1778; and at Amstel, 1782.

The Copenhagen works were begun in 1760. In Sweden they began to make porcelain, in the old manufactory of pottery, in Rörstrand, in 1735, and at Marieberg, in 1759.

Porcelain was made in France, after the first attempt at St. Cloud, in Vincennes, in 1740-1745. The works were removed to Sèvres, in 1756. The Chantilly works were commenced in 1735; Sceaux, 1751; Strasbourg, 1752; Niderviller, 1765; Marseilles, 1766; Lille, 1785; Belleville, 1790.

In Italy, after the manufacture under the Medici ceased, there was no porcelain made until 1726, when one Francesco Vezzi established a manufactory in Venice, and was followed in 1735 by the Marquis Ginori, at Doccia, near Florence. In 1736, at Naples, the Capo di Monti manufactory was begun, under the patronage of Charles III.

In Spain, the only manufactory was that of Buen Retiro, near Madrid, established by Charles III. with workmen brought from Naples.

In England, the first porcelain works were erected at Bow, about 1740; the Chelsea, in 1745; Derby, 1750; Worcester, 1741; Caughley and Lowestoft, 1756; Plymouth, 1760; Bristol, 1772.

Josiah Wedgewood began his pottery works in 1752, but never made porcelain.

The collection here exhibited, though not large, is rich, especially in specimens of Chinese art. It is lent chiefly from the collections of Mrs. A. Burlingame, Mr. G. W. Wales, and Mrs. W. B. Swett. Especially noticeable are, in the first compartment, —

WHITE OVIFORM JAR. G. W. Wales.

ALTAR CUP, white, very old and rare. G. W. Wales.

FIVE-FINGERED ROSADON. G. W. Wales.

CELADON POT, three handles, reign of Yuang-ching, 1725-1735. Mrs. Burlingame.

In the second compartment, —

MOTTLED BLUE JAR, RED DRAGON ON LIP. This exquisite specimen was given by Mr. Geo. B. Dorr.

TWO VASES, WITH FLOWERS IN HIGH-RELIEF.

GREEN DRAGON BOWLS. G. W. Wales.

JAR, CURIOUSLY MOTTLED and painted. Miss Brewer.

ANOTHER, of same fabric. Gift of D. O. Clarke.

ENAMELLED EWER, of unusual form and decoration. Mrs. Burlingame.

A BRICK FROM THE PORCELAIN TOWER OF NANKIN. Tradition ascribes a fabulous age to the original tower; it was rebuilt for the second time in the fifteenth century, and was destroyed in the Taeping rebellion. Of plain white porcelain. Gift of D. O. Clarke.

ANOTHER, WHITE ELEPHANT IN HIGH RELIEF. Presented by M. Brimmer.

In the third compartment, —

ROSADON VASE, Japanese, rich color, and TWO CRACKLED VASES. W. Allan Gay.

CELADON JAR FLEURÉE. G. W. Wales.

BROWN BOWL, CRACKLED. Mrs. Burlingame. This appearance of crackle is not the result of accident or age, but can be produced artificially.

PALE BLUE VASE, centre of lowest shelf. This exquisite color is blown through a tube covered with fine gauze. The bubbles of color burst on striking. Presented by Geo. B. Dorr.

The fourth compartment is filled with BLUE NANKIN ware, lent mostly by Geo. W. Wales. The RICE-PORCELAIN TEAPOT on lower shelf, by Mrs. Burlingame. It bears the date of the reign of Kien Lung, 1736-1795.

The fifth compartment contains, —

On upper shelf, —

MARIEBURG, RÖSTRAND, HAGUE, AND ST. PETERSBURG.
G. W. Wales.

AMERICAN POTTERY, from J. & J. G. Low's Art Tile works, Chelsea, Mass. A variety of glazed tiles and other wares. Head of Bryant and other pieces, in biscuit.

JARS, VASES, etc., in various glazes, from the factory of James Robertson & Sons, Chelsea, Mass., four from the hands of G. W. Fenety. Gift of the makers.

PLATES decorated by Miss Alice H. Cunningham. MUG AND JAR by Miss A. Lee.

CASE H.

PERUVIAN AND MEXICAN POTTERY.

CASE I.

POTTERY OF THE MOUND-BUILDERS. An interesting collection of ancient American pottery, presented by Mrs. Gardner Brewer and Miss Brewer.

Nos. 1 to 18. Water Jars, flask-shaped, some of very graceful forms.

Nos. 25 to 47. Pots and Dishes, with and without handles. No. 31 is curious, the handle being in shape of a bird's head turned in towards the dish.

Nos. 35 and 36 give the outline of a fish; the head and tail are the handles; on one side the long dorsal fin on the other four pectoral and ventral fins.

Nos. 48 to 56. Water Jars with human or animal heads.

They are of dark clay, often mixed with finely powdered shells. These were excavated at Diehlstaad, Missouri, by Dr. Geo. J. Engelmann, from a series of mounds on a peninsula which could have been cut off for defence, fortified by wall and ditch.

The date of the mound-builders has not been determined, and no resemblance can be traced in their skulls to those of modern tribes of Indians. Prof. F. W. Putnam, in the eighth annual report of the Peabody Museum, Cambridge, p. 45, quotes Prof. G. C. Swallow in reference to some similar mounds as follows:—

“The six feet of stratified sands and clays formed around the mounds since they were deserted, the mastodon's tooth found in these strata, and other facts indicate great age. These six feet of thin strata were formed after the mounds and before the three feet of soil resting alike on the mounds and on these strata.”

Also nine specimens of similar pottery dug up near Cairo, Illinois. Lent by Geo. W. Wales.

CASE J.GERMAN AND VENETIAN GLASS.

A box containing four pieces of finely engraved glass. German? Mrs. Wadsworth.

A bowl with ornaments colored, gilded, and in relief, bought at Prince Napoleon's sale. C. C. Perkins.

18 pieces of old Venetian glass. Mrs. Wadsworth.

An old Venetian drinking-glass. Ditto.

3 pieces of German glass, colored. G. W. Wales.

1 cup, highly colored Venetian glass. G. W. Wales.

CASE K.JAPANESE ART.

IN THE FIRST COMPARTMENT. — PORCELAINS AND EARTH-WARE, mostly modern. Chiefly noticeable are, on the upper shelf, OLD SATSUMA VASE, dragon in red and gold; the lip bends over, forming a fringe. PAIR OF VASES, procession of insects caricaturing a Daimio going to court. The lord, a butterfly, is mounted, soldiers precede, attendants bear the insignia of rank, while sombre-colored followers carry the provisions. On the next shelf, KIOTA VASE, a brilliant cock. A curious VASE, BLUE AND WHITE, in shape of an expanded flower. HANGING VASE for flowers, resembling a mediæval drinking-horn. Several fine specimens of EGG-SHELL PORCELAIN, presented by E. Cunningham. On bottom shelf, a fine HIBACHE, incense-burner, Satsuma ware.

IN THE SECOND COMPARTMENT. — BRONZES, mostly modern. FIVE TEAPOTS, of excellent design. VASE, decorated with grasses on which the dew-drops glisten. HANGING FLOWER VASE, half-moon shape, inlaid with silver. TRAY, inlaid silver, and TRAY of lotus-leaf shape. HELMET, sun, moon, dragon, etc., inlaid in gold and silver; several heavy dints show that it has seen service. WOOD CARVING, a Gourd with a Snail.

The TALL VASES in this and the adjoining compartment are of the best of modern chiselling.

IN THE THIRD AND FOURTH COMPARTMENTS. — Case of PATTERNS of BRONZE manufacture. The variety of tone and texture, of inlaid, raised, and engraved work, and the imitation of the antique, are very interesting.

BRONZE VASE, the body cut in wicker pattern, in high relief; a bird fighting with a snake. Dr. W. S. Bigelow.

LARGE BRONZE POT, very richly inlaid with gold and silver, decorated with birds and fantastic ornaments; handles of bamboo stem and leaves; was purchased at Philadelphia, and presented to the Museum.

BALL OF ROCK CRYSTAL.

Thos. Gaffield.

SATSUMA JAR. W. Allan Gay.

LARGE KAGA BOWL. Lent by S. W. French.

SWORD. Dr. W. S. Bigelow.

FOUR PIECES OF EMBROIDERY. Mrs. L. D. Allen.

One by S. K. Bayley.

THREE PIECES OF DINNER SERVICE IN LACQUER, from the Heard Collection.

IN THE FIFTH COMPARTMENT. — FIFTY-SEVEN TEAPOTS, mostly bronze.

IN SIXTH COMPARTMENT. — LARGE VASE. Chas. Wolcott Brooks

PAIR KIOYAKI VASES, eagle and pine; fine crackle. G. W. Wales.

LACQUER ON PORCELAIN. Mrs. Greenleaf.

OLD KIOTA VASE. Harleston Deacon.

SMALL SATSUMA JAR. Very fine work. J. W. Paige.

STORK'S EGG LACQUERED AND IVORY DISH CARVED. O. W. Peabody.

LACQUER BOXES. Lent by J. W. Paige and S. K. Baylies.

A NUMBER OF CURIOS in ivory and wood. Mrs. W. B. Swett.

PAINTED SCREEN, rich gold decoration.

Gift of Olive W. Peabody.

PAIR SATSUMA JARS. The fiery dragon in high relief in gold; figures of Yamato Taki No Mikoto, prince-warrior of old Japan, and his wife, Tachibana Hime. Ground richly shaded with gold. On cover the conventional Chinese lion, Kara Shishi. Old and highly valuable. G. W. Wales.

PAIR VASES. White and red, with medallions in gold outline. Presented.

CABINET, inlaid wood. Mrs. W. B. Swett.

CABINET, inlaid with mother-of-pearl on doors, the inside richly inlaid with woods in various patterns. Presented by F. Amory and G. A. Goddard.

BRONZE GONG, inlaid with dragons in gold. Fine, bold work; the inscription records that it was made over a century ago of a parcel of coins found in a half-corroded state and then several centuries old. The tone is deep and sonorous.

CASE L, on right.

ROOM OF WOOD CARVING, ARMS, AND ARMOR.

PULPIT-DOOR, INLAID WITH IVORY AND EBONY, from a mosque at Cairo. It bears at the base the inscription, "Honor to our master, the Sultan, El-Malek E'Zaher Barqouq, and may God make glorious his reign!"

Sultan Barqouq, founder of the dynasty of Circassian Memlooks, reigned from 1382 to 1398. He twice marched into Syria and repulsed the Tartars under Tamerlane. On the frame above the door (the moucharabieh) is the inscription in large Cufic characters, "Of a surety God commands to reign by power and goodness." This admirable specimen of Saracenic art was purchased in the Egyptian Department of the Exhibition at Philadelphia and presented to the Museum by Martin Brimmer.

THE ORIENTAL ARMS on the left, also, were purchased at Philadelphia and presented by a former citizen of Boston. The head-piece, shield, and arm-pieces are of the richest Persian work, carved in high relief and engraved. An enamelled poignard is especially noticeable.

Those on the right, the bequest of T. B. Lawrence, are damaskeen work (steel inlaid with gold) of great beauty.
